

SLOW STORYTELLING IN THE DIGITAL AGE WORKSHOP FOR EDUCATORS

Sunday, March 5, 2017

Hosted by: The Center for Science and Media |
School of Journalism and Media Studies | College of Sciences
San Diego State University

Taught by Don Belt (right, below), a veteran National Geographic writer and editor, this 4-hour workshop is for any high school or college educator seeking new ways to teach storytelling in the classroom.

Don will share the 'slow journalism' curriculum he teaches at the University of Richmond, based on Pulitzer-winner Paul Salopek's historic Out of Eden Walk tracing the path of ancient human migration across the world for National Geographic.

Spanning seven years and 21,000 miles, the Walk (right) is a model for in-depth multimedia journalism in the digital age, and a terrific classroom resource for educators in journalism and other subjects.

Supported by the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting, Belt's Walk on Campus workshop will offer practical tips on bringing an interactive, "hands on" approach to classroom learning—and inspiring your students to participate in a global reporting enterprise.

THE DETAILS

Who Can Attend: High School and College Educators
(any discipline is welcome!)

When: Sunday, March 5 | 1-5 p.m.

Where: PSFA Building 358 | San Diego State

Refreshments will be provided

Registration: FREE (seats limited, register at link below!)

Photo Credit: John Stanmeyer

Photo Credit: Ed Kashi

Pulitzer Center
ON CRISIS REPORTING

REGISTER: <http://bit.ly/2I80WTK>