Graphic Organizer: Analyzing Under-Reported Stories

1. Headline:
News Outlet:	Journalist(s):

Summary: (use at least 3 details from the reporting to capture its central message)

Reflect: Why did you choose to explore this story? How does this issue connect to you and your community?

2. Headline:

News Outlet:

Journalist(s):

Summary: (use at least 3 details from the reporting to capture its central message)

Reflect: Why did you choose to explore this story? How does this issue connect to you and your community?

3. Headline:

News Outlet:	Journalist(s):

Summary: (use at least 3 details from the reporting to capture its central message)

Reflect: Why did you choose to explore this story? How does this issue connect to you and your community?

4. Headline:
News Outlet:	Journalist(s):

Summary: (use at least 3 details from the reporting to capture its central message)

Reflect: Why did you choose to explore this story? How does this issue connect to you and your community?

5. Headline:

News Outlet:

Journalist(s):

Summary: (use at least 3 details from the reporting to capture its central message)

Reflect: Why did you choose to explore this story? How does this issue connect to you and your community?

CHALLENGE: Now that you've looked through a lot of different stories, identify which story most connects to issues facing you and/or your community. Use the space below, or another sheet of paper, to elaborate on how it connects your experiences or your community's. Respond to the following in your description:

- What do the context in the story and your own have in common?
- What is different between them?
- What can you find out through research about how this issue affects other communities around the world?

Let us know what you think by emailing your writing to education@pulitzercenter.org! Be sure to include the reporting's title and the journalist's name.