A student at Whittier Education Campus sits on a wall in front of Whittier.
This represents how D.C. is because it shows that D.C. is a chill and peaceful place.

Going outside to the school playground on a rainy day, seeing the sun in the sky over a tree, in the reflection of a puddle. This shows that every time it rains it's still sunny in D.C..

These are paintings of flowers in our garden at Whittier Education Campus. This shows how much fun we have making arts and crafts. This also shows that D.C. is a fun place to live and visit. This shows D.C. cares about spreading the word about plants.

Students take pictures in the playground at Whittier Education Campus on a rainy day. In D.C., we get a lot of different weather, and at Whittier we love to play baseball when we are outside. It represents our Everyday DC because it's a part of our environment and gives us a place to learn and play in D.C..
