

Racism Towards

Hispanics

By: Britney C

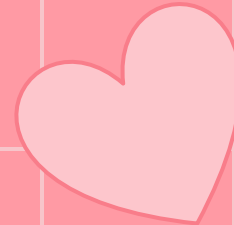

What is an underreported story

An underreported story is a story that is not talked about enough. An example of an underreported story is About a teen boy who was not allowed to walk during his graduation because the school said his dreads violated school dress code. The reason this is an underreported stories because people are racist and they don't seem to care.

Racism Towards Hispanics

This is an imported topic we should discuss in class because lots of students are hispanic. Hispanics have been discriminated against for a long time and nobody really talks about it. If people don't talk about it people will keep talking bad about hispanics.

What is an underreported story we need to study?

It is very important to learn about racism towards hispanics because many hispanic people have experienced racism. For example one of the situations that i've heard of was one of my friends was called racist things. She was very upset that she was called these things. They told her to go back to her country and that she had no business being here.

This is why we should learn about racism because this will continue to happen if people don't understand that this is wrong.

Another reason why we should learn about racism towards hispanics is because i was also called something racist by the same person that called my friend something racist. They told me i looked like pocahontas and they assumed i didn't know english and ate only tacos. This is another reason why we should learn about racism towards hispanics because all this racism will not be noticed unless people speak up about it and it will continue to happen

How can we share and tell others?

I believe that the best way to tell others about this topic is having teachers teach it. If teachers teach this kids will know not to say racist things. It also spreads awareness to the younger generation. Kids will also talk about the situation and adults might understand that it is wrong. This shows that teachers teaching this topic is the most effective way of sharing this topic because it will get to larger groups of people.