Summarize: Critical Facts from the Text

The government has had to provide drought relief to people living in the Kunene region. Organizations such as IREMA has provided livestock to some farmers but it's only a short-term solution. Others have had to look for other ways to support themselves such as growing crops or selling products to tourists.

Analyze: What is the writer's overall claim?

While it's predicted that rain will fall again soon, the Kunene region can no longer rely solely on livestock. They must look towards outside sources such as gardening or government aid to support themselves.

Evaluate: What do you notice about the writer's structure or organization? How effective is it for the purpose of the text?

Each new topic in the text is introduced with a large subheading. This is effective in separating different ideas in the main topic.

Evaluate: Focus on the multimedia components of the text. What photographs are used? Videos? Podcasts? Other visuals? How effective are they in adding to the purpose of the text?

This article uses photographs to give readers a visual of how the Kunene region has been impacted by droughts. This is effective in showing how severe the droughts are.
