

I used to think only black people live in Africa and it was only part of the black culture and I also thought that Africa was just a place full of trees but now I know that Africa is not just 1 whole country but it has 54 whole countries in Africa and there are many cultures and different languages and different dances and food and transportation and different names and families they have different clothing colors and different percings and things and Africa is a continent

The people who were enslaved were...
Black people in Africa that were super smart and they were very <sup>good</sup> farmers and artists and they have their own languages and loves. And they were good at looking. And they were kings and queens and great doctors.

How do you uncover and reclaim historical identities

re claim; take pride in uncover; find out historical identities; the history of people

I think you can uncover and reclaim historical identities by understanding your history and asking your grandparents about things your people have done in the past and what you could do to also make history.

She uncovered that she was from beautiful land that their ancestors lived in.

She felt very proud

She discovered this part of her identity from her dad

How do you uncover and reclaim historical identities?

- uncover: figure out
- reclaim: take pride in
- historical identities: history of you!

I think you uncover and reclaim historical identities by 1. talking with historic people to uncover the history of yourself or your family. 2. Searching for old heirlooms and researching them. 3.

I used to think the people were poor and they struggled in Africa but now I think the people strive and kingdoms ruled and they have many memorable land marks such as:

the Nile river, the Sahara desert and the Amazon forest

rain

4. WHO was enslaved?

happy, joyful, strong, and loving, powerful Africans who meant no harm but just to live life happily and free.

To me This means that the people that were inslaved refused to die so we can live.

And have a nice life. For us to live. And the people that were inslaved never get up.
